[02] SDG02: Zero Hunger

[2.5.2] Events for local farmers and food producers

Description:

University of Indonesia is committed to eliminating hunger as part of the joint world agenda for equal humanity and free from hunger. The university conducts community service programs and events where researchers can directly apply their knowledge to assist people who are under the threat of poverty and hunger. The programs reflect the importance of collaborative efforts to transfer knowledge of sustainable cultivation and environmental management. It also includes the raising of awareness about the significance of local food procurement. All programs connect traditional economic activities including agriculture and animal husbandry and the science and technology to maintain food security.
